#StandWithUkraine

KENYA Land of Mystery and Marvels

Another beautiful way to wake and begin our day!

We're due to leave the US in 164 days! BUT we still need a few more adventurous souls to join us! :>) Put your thinking caps on ... I'd hate to have to cancel or postpone those of you who have already committed!

Here we have an example of an African Painted Dog, on the left, and 2 Hyenas on the right.

We'll most likely see Hyenas while out on our game drives, not sure about the Painted Dog. Both Hyenas and Painted Dogs travel in packs, they do have unique differences. The Hyenas is larger, longer, and heavier (by up to 100 lbs!) and more closely related to cats than dogs! The "dog", however is faster, but the Hyena is deadlier.

Here we have an example of a typical Kenyan Traffic Jam! If it's not cattle, it can be elephants, or zebra, or some other animal you'll want to take photos of ... BTW, the Maasai believe ALL the cattle in the world belong to them! Just another "Fun Fact". :>) You can also see the paved roadway in the distance. The first time I went, they didn't have that!!! They had gravel, dust, and rocks that were a joy to drive over! (Please note the sarcasm! LOL!!!)

We'll see lots of monkeys along the way ... The Vervets are the cutest, BUT they can be very annoying! AND they will steal whatever they can IF you let them! They are extremely prevalent in and around the properties we'll be staying at. Remember to always close your doors or tent flaps or they will become your unwanted guests!

Don't even think about petting them ... they're cute, but they are wild animals. There will also be Baboons in the area ... again, don't try to pet them! They have BIG teeth!

Ah, yes! Here's Mom out with the Kids ... We will see Warthogs mixed in with other animals along the way ... They got the Nickname "Kenyan Express" because when they run, their skinny tails are straight up like whip antennas! We'll see them up close at the Giraffe Centre.

I'm still getting questions about clothing, food, and how safe things are in Kenya. We'll get to all that AGAIN, but right now, in order to hold the cost of this adventure, we need a few more people to join us. If you can find anyone, it will benefit all of us! :>)

If any of you wish to re-visit previous newsletters, you'll find them all at: www.revengetrek.com along with some FAQs and a link to our brochure!

Keep your questions coming even if you think yours is a dumb one! There are no dumb questions! You haven't been there before and don't know what to expect! All I can say is "expect amazing!"

'til next week!!! Kwa heri!
