

KENYA Land of Mystery and Marvels!

Monday, 05 April 2021

Good morning, All!!!

Hope this finds you happy, healthy, and anticipating a visit to Kenya!!!

As you can see, things are quite "adequate" LOL!!!

We've already met most of The Big-5 ... no, the giraffe isn't among them, but it is the tallest animal we'll meet. ... and we will meet MANY of them!

Giraffe Manor - you've probably seen it on TV.

Today I'd like to introduce you to the next of the Big 5 ... The Rhino! They come in 2 "colors" - White and Black.

The black rhinoceros is a large herbivore having two upright horns on the nasal bridge. Its thick protective skin, formed from layers of collagen positioned in a lattice structure, is very hard to puncture. It is now critically endangered and hunting is extremely limited due to this. In the context of big-game hunting in Africa, the term "rhinoceros" may also refer to the white rhinoceros, but among big five game hunters, the black rhino is preferred.

Black rhinoceros (Diceros bicornis)

I love this photo. They look so peaceful! Don't be fooled!!! When protecting their young or chasing a danger, they move REALLY fast and look like massive TANKS!!!

After 2 nights, we leave Ol Tukai for Lake Nakuru Lodge ... the lake is home to about a gazillion flamingos!

We'll only be here for one night, but ...!!! As you'll see, the rooms are generous, the baths are indoor (LOL!), and, once again, the food is fabulous!

As usual, there will be a pool and a bar!!! Just in case you're hot and thirsty!

Oh, yes, there is a gift shop if you wish to add to your wardrobe! :-> (...and I know you will!)

That's it for this week! As usual, I ask that you send ANY questions, PLEASE email or call me!
